It is to be noted that Lehigh University (in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania) is the owner of the Journal of Differential Geometry, and holds copyright to all its Content, except where otherwise indicated in the journal. The Journal of Differential Geometry is published by International Press under license from Lehigh University.

It is to be noted that the Institut Mittag-Leffler, of the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences, is the owner of the journals Acta Mathematica and Arkiv för Matematik, and holds copyright to all their Content, except where otherwise indicated in the journals. Acta Mathematica and Arkiv för Matematik are published by International Press under license from the Institut Mittag-Leffler.

It is to be noted that all remaining journals published by International Press are owned by International Press.

The Subscribing Institution has perpetual and irrevocable access rights for all titles purchased, or for subscription titles, for those years for which a subscription was paid.

The Subscribing Institution may grant electronic access to the Content only to authorized users within its own private electronic information network. Those who may access the Content within this network are limited to the Subscribing Institution’s faculty, staff, students, library patrons, or other authorized users of the library’s resources, working either on-site or remotely through an authorized institutional proxy server. Downloading and saving copies of the Content by automated means is prohibited.

The Content is strictly for educational, research, or personal use. Electronic or printed copies of individual journal articles may be shared with other parties outside the Subscribing Institution, but strictly for the recipient’s private use. An unlimited number of copies of a journal article may be printed and distributed, as part of course work, at the Subscribing Institution.

The Subscribing Institution acknowledges that it has no right to sell any of the Content whose copyright is held by International Press, unless with specific written consent of International Press. Likewise, the Subscribing Institution acknowledges that it has no right to sell any of the Content whose copyright is held by Lehigh University, by the Institut Mittag-Leffler, or by any other party, except with specific written consent of the copyright holder.

The Subscribing Institution may use electronic copies of the Content, or printed copies derived therefrom, for inter-library loan, but with the same limitations that apply to copies made directly from the printed edition of the journals. Specifically, copies must be made in compliance with Section 108 of the Copyright Act of the United States. Any electronic or printed copies of the Content must retain all the original copyright notices.

Electronic transmission of journal articles is allowed unless, as a purpose or effect of such, the library receiving such copies does so in such quantities as to substitute for a subscription. Interlibrary loans are restricted to academic libraries for educational purposes.

The Subscribing Institution may create and perpetually maintain electronic archival copies of any and all Content which it has received by legitimate subscription, or which was deliberately designated by International Press as open-access, i.e., available without a subscription. The Subscribing Institution is understood to be the legal owner of such electronic archival material. The Subscribing Institution has the right to perform—on any of its electronic archive of the Content—various indexing, searching, and data mining processes, including provision of graphic interfaces to the texts based on such processes. All such processes are solely for the teaching, learning, and research purposes at the Subscribing Institution and only for authorized users of the Subscribing Institution. Should the Licensor ever cease to provide access to the contents purchased, the Subscribing Institution may grant its authorized users access to its electronic archive copy of the Content, and may permit those authorized users to make use of the Content per the terms of this agreement.

The Subscribing Institution hereby acknowledges that the Content is protected by copyright law, database protection law, and any other relevant law, of the United States and of the countries in which the Content is used.

The Subscribing Institution hereby acknowledges that it has no claim to ownership by reason of its use of, or access to, International Press electronic journals. Recompiling, publication or republication of any portion of the Contents, in any form or medium whatsoever, may be done only with specific written permission from International Press.

The Subscribing Institution hereby acknowledges the following: In the event that the Subscribing Institution violates any term of this agreement, and the violation is not resolved within thirty (30) days of written notice thereof being given by International Press, International Press may suspend and/or terminate the Subscribing Institution's access to International Press electronic journals. Any use of the electronic journals beyond the scope of this agreement, or any fraudulent, abusive, or otherwise illegal activities, may be grounds for termination of online access. The foregoing includes, but is not limited to, activity that can burden International Press' online journal hosting system with excessive data requests, such as use of computer programs that automatically download content, commonly known as robots, spiders, crawlers, wanderers, or accelerators.

This agreement shall be considered as effective from the date its signing, or from the ___ day of _____ 2016, whichever date is earlier. Its terms supersede those of any previous agreement made by this same institution with regard to the access and usage of the published electronic contents of the journals specified herein. This agreement will be considered effective in perpetuity unless and until it is superseded by another.

The undersigned agrees on behalf of the Institution to all terms specified herein.
